ROB THOMAS | SPEAKER BIO

Rob Thomas is a speaker, author, and corporate trainer who has spent more than 25 years studying, practicing, and teaching the power of professional relationships.

As the founder of Rob Thomas Networking and author of Who Do You NEED to Meet?, Rob challenges the traditional idea of networking as collecting contacts, working a room, or simply expanding a LinkedIn network. Instead, he teaches a practical, intentional approach to building relationships grounded in conversation, trust, and genuine human connection.

Today, Rob works with organizations to help emerging professionals develop the relationship-building and communication skills they need to navigate the modern workplace with greater confidence. His keynotes and training programs give participants practical strategies they can immediately apply to strengthen workplace relationships, build professional visibility, and create opportunities throughout their careers.

Rob's philosophy is simple:
Technology can create access.
You create connection.
